Standard prints are traditional photographic paper prints. Sizes 11x14 or over should be professionally custom framed or they will rumple in their frame over time, allowing air and dust to ruin them. Standard prints should be kept under glass or in an album to preserve them.

Premium prints are mounted to a sturdy masonite back and given a light textured finish as well as a lustre sealant to protect them. These prints do not require glass. Premium prints of any size can be dropped into a store-bought frame without need for custom framing.

Heirloom prints are the portraits your family will discover in the attic, looking as beautiful as the day you took them. The portrait is pressure mounted by hand to heavy canvas, giving the entire print an actual texture that you can feel. After the canvas is adhered, your print can be mounted to a masonite backing or stretched over a wood frame. These prints should not be glassed, as it will hide the lovely texture.
